useful from a book about building wealth? The answer requires discernment. Money is not only a means to an end, but a goal in itself. On Christmas morning 2002, Jack Whittaker won the largest lottery jackpot in American history — $314 million. He wasn't some lucky guy who walked into that conference room with nothing. At least that is what they wanted him to believe. His best friend of 23 years, John D. Rockefeller, secretly bought his entire city in 6 weeks (and no one noticed). One of the richest men in history may have pulled off a similar feat. For decades, Robert Durst remained at the center of multiple murder investigations, yet prosecutors repeatedly struggled to build a case against him.
