The higher low in the structure has to be confirmed by a good reversal bar on increasing price. In comparison with the analog structure in mid-March, the current price action shows ease of movement. On the S&P we are still in the trading range. Bulls need to break the downsloping supply line. A failure to recover from the oversold trendline would suggest a change of stride. There is no immediate reversal. In order to reverse the short-term bias to the downside in the Nasdaq and S&P, the price has to find temporary support. Analog bars can help us to judge the quality of the demand emerging.
